

COMBAT MEDICS

Photos by Staff Sgt. Keith Brown

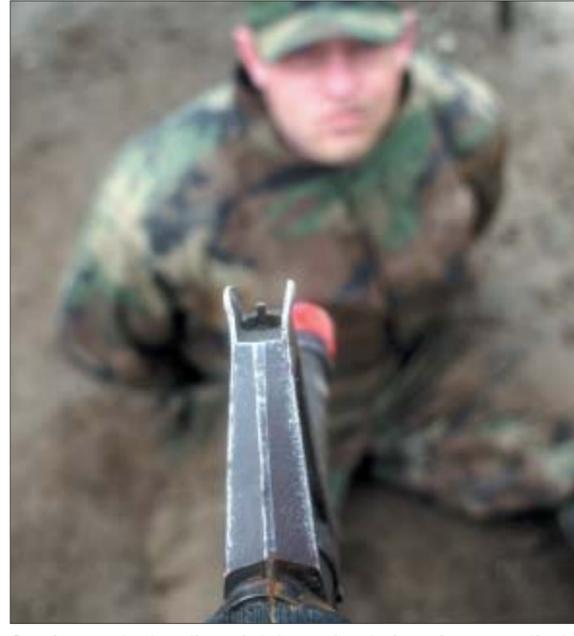

Above: Staff Sgt. Gregory Brooks, 3rd Medical Group, "cuffs" a "bad guy" during medical training exercises at Camp Mad Bull April 30. The training simulated 3rd MDG and Kulis Air National Guard personnel being forward-deployed under field combat conditions. Mass casualty exercises were held April 23, 25, 27, 30, and May 2 to ensure medics were ready to handle patient retrieval and treatment under attack conditions. The training is conducted annually, consisting of five training sessions prior to wrap-up with the "mass casualty" exercise.

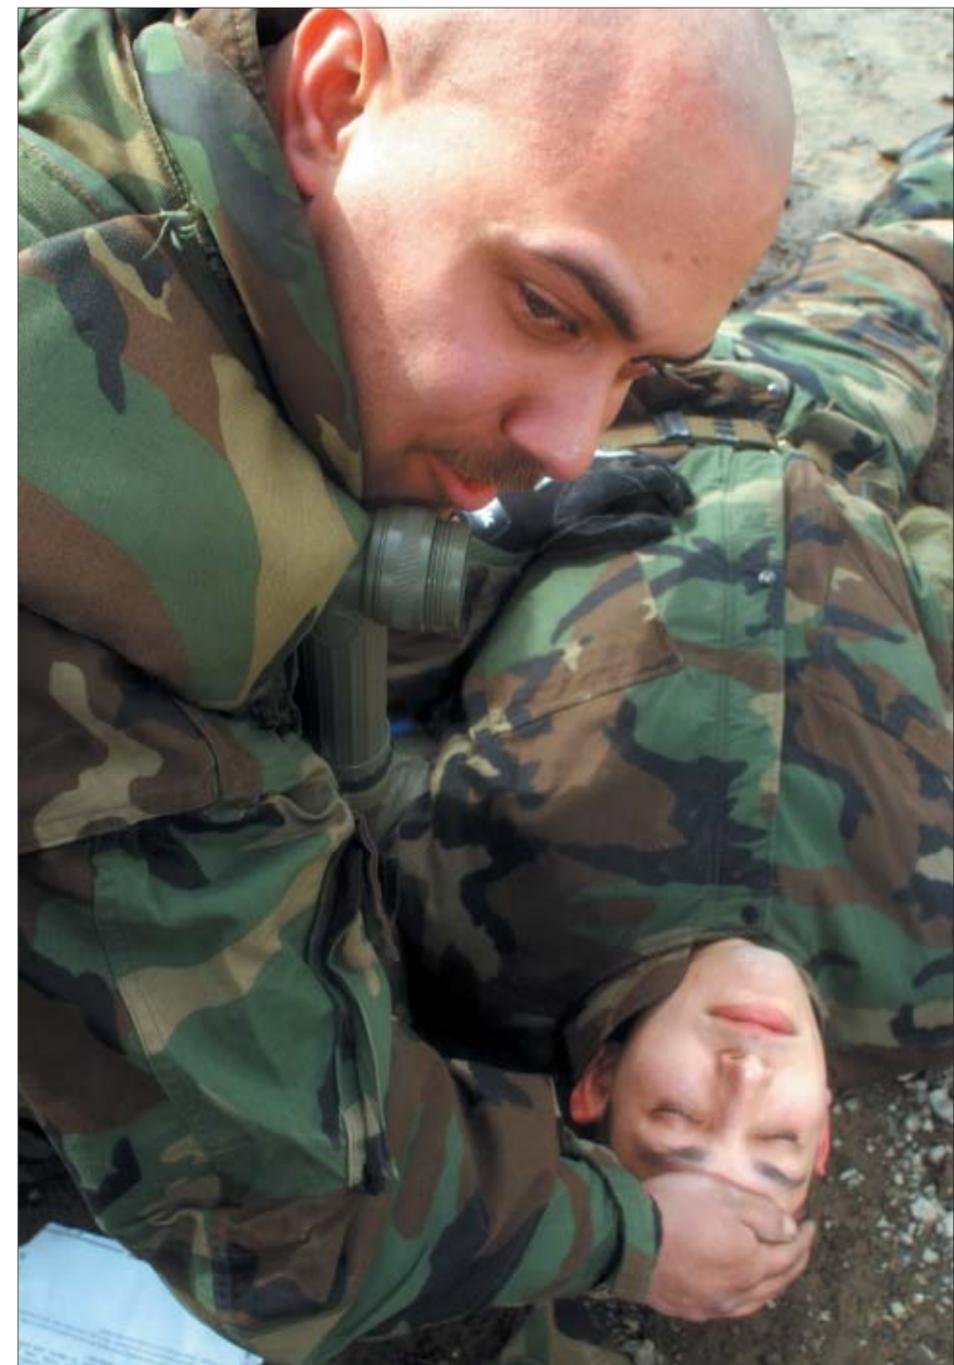

A cadre member doctors up Staff Sgt. Patrick Brown, 732nd Air Mobility Squadron, to play the part of a victim during the Combat Readiness Exercises.

A combat medic keeps a watchful eye on the camp's perimeter.

Serving as the last line of defense for their patients, medical personnel subdue a "bad guy" at gunpoint.

Staff Sgt. Gregory Brooks, 3rd Medical Group, attends to Airman 1st Class Roberto Chavez, 3rd MDG.